

About the Assiscong Marsh

The Assiscong Marsh is Hunterdon County's largest freshwater marsh, spanning 25 acres. Wetlands were once considered places of little value and were lost to development. However, areas like Assiscong Marsh act as natural detention basins to channel flood waters during storms and prevent damage to other areas. The marsh attracts and supports a spectacular concentration of migratory and resident waterfowl that use it as a resting or breeding area along the Atlantic Flyway. It is also home to other wildlife, such as muskrats, frogs, snakes, and turtles.

The County acquired the Assiscong Marsh in 1974 as one of the first properties along the South Branch Reservation. Today, the reservation totals over 1000 acres and preserves the watershed along the South Branch of the Raritan River, as well as offering recreational opportunities to explore its natural resources.

Recreational Opportunities

The Assiscong Marsh is a wonderful location to observe wildlife. The marsh serves as a resting and breeding area for migrating birds along the Atlantic Flyway. Regular inhabitants include Canada Geese, Mallards, Black Ducks, Wood Ducks, Northern Pintails, and many others. Great Blue Herons and shorebirds can be seen in the marsh when the water level is low. The marsh is also home to muskrats. All wildlife viewing is from the road shoulder—there is no access to the far side of the water.

It is the policy of the County to provide reasonable accommodations to persons with disabilities upon advance notice of need. Persons requiring accommodations should make a request at least two weeks prior to program attendance.
