

About Charlestown Reserve

Charlestown is named after a handful of residential homes and a one-room schoolhouse. Charles Hovies (1898-1972) acquired three abandoned farms on this site in 1943 and established apple and peach orchards. In 1958, he married Harriet Mathison, and also planted Christmas trees and groves of beech, tulip poplar, black locust, and persimmon. Following Charles's death, Harriet remained on the farm and sold 203 acres to the County in 1981. She retained 12 acres around the house for herself, which she deeded to the County in 1989 with a clause granting her a life-right to the property. After she passed away in 2000, the County acquired additional acreage, now totaling 269 acres. Serving as an island of green in the area north of Interstate 78, the land has been held in trust as a conservation area. Adjacent state land adds additional area where plants can thrive and animals can roam.

Recreational Opportunities

Charlestown offers a moderate-grade hiking trail. The trailhead is located at the right corner of the parking lot. The trail starts with a moderate climb up a hillside and eventually intersects with an old field road. The old road meanders through the park and loops back on itself. Mountain biking is permitted within the park, but horseback riding is prohibited.

Wildlife & Habitat

The main habitat at Charlestown is second generation oak-hickory forest. Along the trail are stone walls, which provide evidence of Charlestown's agrarian past. Today, these stone walls provide habitat for snakes and small mammals such as chipmunks.

The rocky hillsides and other secluded areas of Charlestown provide a haven for Hunterdon County's more reclusive mammals. Gray Fox evidence, such as scat and tracks, has been found.

The preserve also supports a wide range of woodland bird species. Tufted Titmice and Black-capped Chickadees are common sights. Red-tailed Hawks and Turkey Vultures can usually be seen flying above. Wild Turkeys take advantage of the large supply of acorns and other nuts. Woodpeckers, such as Downy or Red-bellied Woodpeckers, can be seen and heard drilling the trees.

Hunting

Hunting is permitted to control the deer population. Hunters must obtain a special permit issued by the Division. Visitors between September and February are strongly encouraged to wear blaze orange or confine visits to Sundays.

It is the policy of the County to provide reasonable accommodations to persons with disabilities upon advance notice of need. Persons requiring accommodations should make a request at least two weeks prior to program attendance.

With the exception of park properties with reservable facilities, all properties are "carry in / carry out" and trash/recycling receptacles are not provided. Please plan accordingly and do not leave any trash/recyclables behind.
